Executive Summary

Sophisticated AI-generated YouTube channels, posing as Jewish rabbis, are systematically producing and monetizing antisemitic content framed as "insider Jewish wealth wisdom."

The following report, compiled by the Antisemitism Research Center (ARC) at CAM, identifies 63 YouTube channels featuring such "rabbis" and engaging in coordinated campaigns. Together, these channels have amassed a following of more than 526,000 subscribers, produced over 3,300 videos, and generated more than 30.7 million views.

In-depth analysis reveals common narrative arcs, identical visual templates, and shared linguistic patterns recasting longstanding antisemitic tropes from authoritative Jewish religious figures. By posing as real Jewish voices, these "rabbis" spread hate, erode trust, and encourage real-world violence against Jews. YouTube makes the danger worse because this content can remain searchable on Google for years.

Three findings distinguish this YouTube network from the previously documented Instagram and TikTok operations:

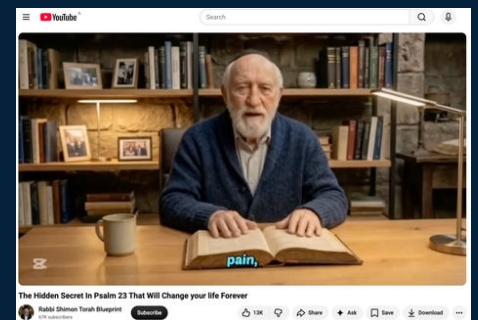

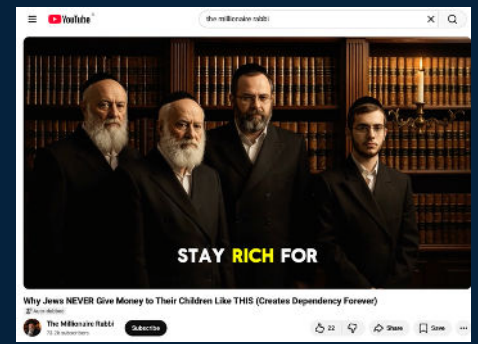

Multilingual scale: Channels are produced in or dubbed into at least six languages – English, Hebrew, Spanish, French, Italian, and German – indicating a deliberate global distribution strategy.

Cross-platform continuity: Personas such as "Rabbi Stirberg," "Rabbi Rothstein," and "Rabbi Silverstein" appear simultaneously on TikTok, Instagram, and YouTube, with Stirberg's YouTube channel linking to the same storefront advertised on his TikTok profile – direct evidence of a single coordinated network operating across all three major platforms.

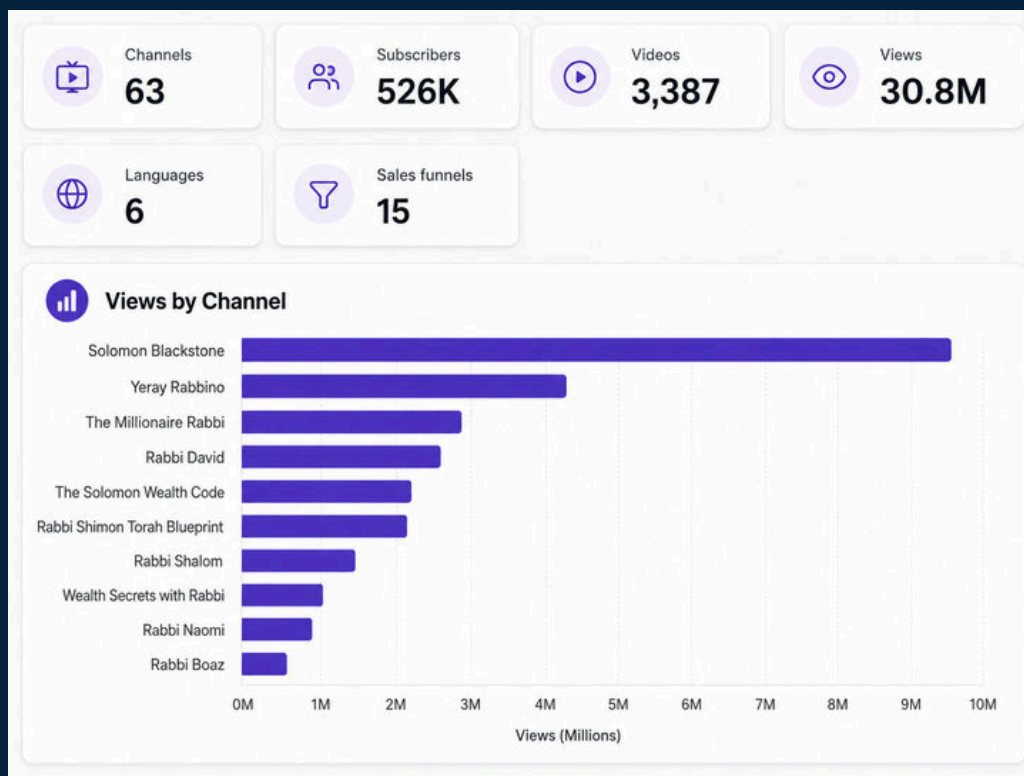

The ARC has previously documented a network of more than 80 AI-generated "rabbis" on Instagram and 49 such accounts on TikTok. In collaboration with Meta and TikTok, CAM has taken action to stop the proliferation of these accounts.

CAM now urges YouTube and its parent company, Alphabet Inc./Google, to show the same level of responsiveness.

Scale of the Network

The largest single channel, "Solomon Blackstone," has accumulated over 9.49 million views across 326 videos. Six additional channels exceeded 1 million views each. Several personas operate across multiple duplicate channels: "Rabbi Goldman" across 10, "Rabbi Miriam" across 7, "Solomon/Blackstone" across 6; a pattern consistent with a deliberate strategy to survive platform-level takedowns.

Dangerous Impacts

- False Legitimacy: Fake "rabbis" make conspiracy theories look like insider Jewish admissions, giving antisemitic lies false credibility. The videos repackage old libels about Jewish greed, control, financial manipulation, and secret power.
- Radicalization of Young Audiences: YouTube recommendations push this content into "hidden knowledge" and conspiracy spaces, normalizing antisemitism as truth.
- Persistence and Searchability: Unlike short-form content, YouTube videos remain searchable, Google-indexed, and discoverable for years.
- Erosion of Trust: Impersonating Jewish religious figures undermines real Jewish voices and gives viewers an excuse to say, "Jews admitted it themselves."
- Commercial Incentives: Courses, e books, affiliate links, and paid funnels turn antisemitic content into a revenue model, encouraging operators to keep scaling it.
- Real-world Consequences: These tropes have fueled violence against Jews throughout history. Today, they provide "evidence" to justify hostility and further dehumanize Jewish communities.

Conclusion and Recommendations

What appears as helpful financial advice is, upon inspection, a systematic and monetized effort to sow antisemitic hatred under the protective cover of fabricated Jewish religious authority.

Immediate Steps YouTube Should Take:

Detection: Invest in AI detection tools specifically trained to identify synthetic religious impersonation, including the recurring visual templates used across this network.

Algorithm: Ensure platform recommendation systems "Up Next," homepage, and search autocomplete do not actively direct traffic to channels in this network.

Monetization: Demonetize channels presenting fabricated rabbinic personas and disrupt associated affiliate, membership, and Super Thanks revenue streams.

Cross-platform Coordination: Share intelligence with Meta and TikTok on shared personas, storefront domains, and operator entities.
