

Banned for antisemitism, back in a day, and getting paid

X removed “Parody Jeff” for a documented record of antisemitic content. The same operator now posts as @RabbiJeffx, and collects money for it through Buy Me a Coffee.

In September 2026, X removed the account Parody Jeff (@parodyjeffx), a 182,884-follower account documented by ARC as a systematic, high-volume producer of antisemitic content. The operator has since relaunched under a new handle, @RabbiJeffx, in direct circumvention of the platform's enforcement action. ARC began tracking the successor account recently. Preliminary monitoring indicates it has resumed the same content strategy and is again reaching audiences in the millions. The operator is also monetizing this activity through a Buy Me a Coffee page, in apparent violation of that platform's published content restrictions. Two platforms are currently sustaining this operation: one supplies the audience, the other supplies the income. Both have the evidence, the policies, and the ability to end it. This brief lays out the documented record and calls on X and Buy Me a Coffee to act now.

The documented record: @parodyjeffx

ARC's full account report on @parodyjeffx analyzed 57 posts over a 45-day window and established that the account did not function as parody in any meaningful sense. Antisemitic hostility was its defining and consistent purpose.

KEY FINDINGS

- Systematic deployment of classic antisemitic tropes. The dataset documented blood libel, the deicide accusation, dual-loyalty claims (including the “Sayanim” spy-network conspiracy), Great Replacement narratives attributed to named Jewish officials, and dehumanizing language describing Jews as “beasts,” “rabid dogs,” and “not human.”
- Jewish control conspiracy as the dominant narrative. The most common narrative (12 posts) framed Jewish individuals and institutions as secretly coordinating control of governments, media, and finance, including fabricated “insider leaks” attributed to rabbis and Israeli figures.
- AI-prompt laundering. The account repeatedly directed loaded queries to X's AI assistant (@Grok) to present antisemitic tropes, including the blood libel and Talmudic distortions, as neutral research questions.
- Amplification far beyond the follower base. Average reach of 358,674 views per post, nearly double the follower count, indicates significant algorithmic amplification or coordinated engagement.
- Deliberate risk management. Four posts deleted during the monitoring period show an operator actively managing moderation exposure. This was premeditated activity, not impulsive posting.

The relaunch: @RabbiJeffx

X's rules prohibit circumventing a suspension by creating new accounts. @RabbiJeffx is precisely that: a successor account established after enforcement, continuing the same antisemitic output that led to the original removal. The prior removal decision has already established that this content violates X's policies. The relaunch does not present a new moderation question; it presents an enforcement question. An operator with a documented record of 94.7% hostile output, systematic use of historically lethal antisemitic myths, and demonstrated ban evasion has forfeited any presumption of good faith. Every day this account stays up, X's own enforcement decision is being openly defied on X's own platform, and millions more users are exposed to blood libel, deicide accusations, and dehumanization of Jews. X does not need new evidence. It needs to enforce the ruling it already made.

Monetization: Buy Me a Coffee

The operator is financing this activity through a Buy Me a Coffee page, converting antisemitic reach into direct revenue. Buy Me a Coffee's published restrictions explicitly prohibit content that promotes hate based on race, ethnicity, or religion; slurs, dehumanizing language, and coded dog-whistles; accounts created to attack or harass communities; and content that spreads harmful misinformation. Its Terms of Service separately prohibit posting knowingly false information and abusive or defamatory conduct. The documented record of this operator, including fabricated quotes attributed to real, named individuals, falls squarely within these prohibitions. ARC recommends filing a formal report with Buy Me a Coffee's trust team requesting termination of the payment page. Cutting the revenue stream removes the financial incentive that sustains the operation and raises the cost of each subsequent relaunch.

THE ASK

What must happen now

- 1 X must remove @RabbiJeffx immediately. This is ban evasion by an operator X has already judged in violation of its rules. Priority removal, and suspension of any further successor accounts, is the only credible enforcement outcome.
- 2 Buy Me a Coffee must terminate the payment page. No payment platform should be the revenue engine of an antisemitic influence operation. The documented conduct violates Buy Me a Coffee's own restrictions on hate, dehumanization, and misinformation. The page and its payout capability must be permanently shut down.
- 3 ARC will keep watching. ARC is continuing longitudinal tracking of @RabbiJeffx, building a full dataset on the successor account, and mapping its network to expose coordinated amplification, backup accounts, and any replacement funding channels.
