ONLINE ANTISEMITISM MONITORING

When Politics Becomes a Vehicle for Antisemitism

The online response to Stephen Miller's appointment

On November 6, 2026, President Trump announced Stephen Miller's appointment as White House chief of staff. Between November 6 and 16, CAM collected and classified 14,479 posts, replies and comments in the online response. Across social media platforms, antisemitic content targeting Stephen and Katie Miller accumulated at least 7.1 million views. The posts include Holocaust taunts, threats against Miller's family and conspiracy claims targeting Jews collectively. A politician's views never justify threats against his family, attacks on his Jewish identity or hatred directed at Jews as a people.

FINDINGS

What CAM found

Of the 14,479 items, 12,006 (83%) used Nazi or Hitler insults or comparisons.

Other items accused Jews of secretly controlling institutions (814), questioned Jewish loyalty (673), or used slurs and dehumanizing language (535).

> What counts as a Nazi insult. Posts that call Miller or his wife Nazis, compare Miller to Nazi figures such as Hitler or Joseph Goebbels, or attach Nazi labels and nicknames to them.

VIOLENCE

Calls for violence

CAM classified 34 items as calls for violence. They include calls to put Jews in gas chambers and ovens, a demand that Miller and his family be tortured, and Holocaust imagery aimed at his wife and child. Two of the 34 are older posts that quoted violent language in order to condemn it.

Nothing to see here. Just Trump appointing his own Joseph Goebbels as Chief of Staff. Put Stephen Miller beside the original Nazi propaganda minister and the resemblance is uncanny. If this isn't a five-alarm warning, what the f is?

SEVERITY

How severe CAM rated each item

Severity rates the content itself, not how widely it spread. Most items are hostile statements that can be antisemitic in context. A small number threaten or celebrate violence against Jews.

Extreme · 62 · 0.4%

Threatens, calls for or celebrates violence against Jews, including gas chamber and oven language, or uses the most extreme tropes such as blood libel and Holocaust denial.

Explicit · 1,993 · 13.8%

Openly hostile to Jews without a threat of violence, such as slurs, dehumanizing language and claims of Jewish control or divided loyalty.

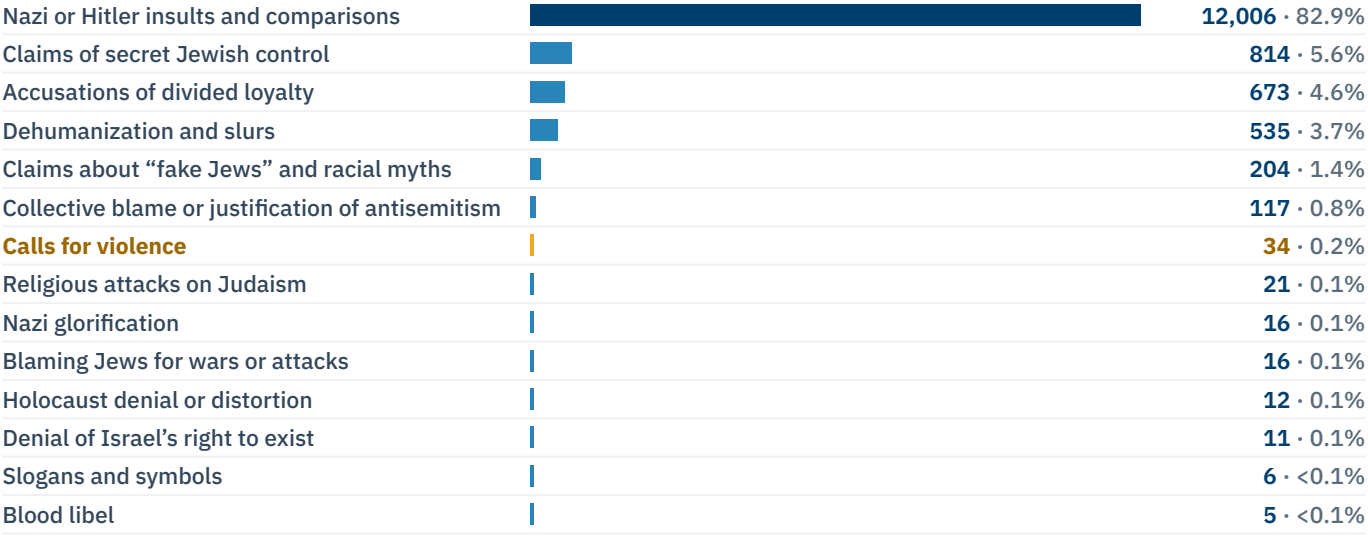

Hostile · 12,424 · 85.8%

General hostile or insulting statements that can be antisemitic in context, such as Nazi insults and comparisons aimed at Miller.

CONCLUSION

Political disagreement never justifies threats against a Jewish family, Holocaust taunts or accusations against Jews collectively. The documented examples show why opposition to antisemitism must remain consistent, whatever the politics of the person targeted. Political leaders and platforms should apply that principle consistently.

METHOD

What the figures cover

CAM tracked the response using a linguistic approach. On each platform it monitored, the research team searched for language connecting Miller's appointment to the antisemitic terms, tropes and narratives it has already documented, then classified every matching item by category and severity. The figures describe the material collected through this process.

The collection period ran from November 6 to November 16, 2026. CAM counted each URL once. Five items were included under a rule that counts specific phrases even when someone quotes them in reporting or criticism.
